Distinctive features

Guildford High School is an academically selective day school for girls aged 4 to 18. The school was founded in 1888 as a progressive school offering a first class education to girls and, under the leadership of Mrs Fiona Boulton, Headmistress, it continues to deliver this to today's pupils. A statement of the school's Mission Statement, Aims and Ethos may be found on the school's website or requested in hard copy from Reception.

History

The first Headmistress, Miss Morton, had the foresight to select the current site for its convenient location, close to Guildford town centre and the London Road railway station, and the school's successful development has continued ever since. Guildford High School has always been linked to the Church Schools Company and today remains a member of United Learning, a group founded on the principles of respect, service and compassion.
